Katie Koestner to attend Sexual Assault Awareness Week

by SAMANTHA EADDY
Special to the Future

According to the National Victim Center, every minute 1.3 women are raped and every 15 seconds a woman is battered. University of Central Florida Rape Awareness and Prevention Network is addressing these national problem on a local level.

The network will sponsor Sexual Assault Awareness Week activities beginning Sept. 18 that will inform students and the entire Central Florida community on where to go if they are sexually assaulted, how to avoid situations that may lead to assault and how to defend themselves against attackers.

"It's important that people know what to do and where to go for help if they become sexual assault victims," said Mary Ann McCunn, UCF Police Department Victim Advocate and co-chair of the UCF Rape Awareness and Prevention Network. "It's important that they know help exists and they're not alone."

The network, which comprises 13 on-campus organizations, will receive help from Katie Koestner in promoting its message against sexual assault. Koestner will speak on date rape at 7 p.m., Sept. 18 in the Student Center Auditorium.

Koestner received national recognition after publicly discussing her own experiences as a date rape victim. Near the beginning of her freshman year at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., Koestner was raped by a fellow student who she had dated for several weeks. An HBO docudrama "No Visible Bruises: The Katie Koestner Story," featured the tragedy that nearly destroyed her. On June 3, 1991, she appeared on the cover of "Time" and in its article titled "Date Rape." She also was interviewed by the "Washington Post", "New York Times" and the "Chicago Tribune" and has appeared on "Larry King Live", "Inside Edition" as well as many others.

Koestner, a resident of Pennsylvania, publicly discusses being raped to give "a face" to statistics about rape victims. In a "Philadelphia Inquirer" article dated Sept. 25, 1992, she stated: "Numbers don't mean things, people mean things. I wanted them to say, 'Katie is a softball player, she plays clarinet, she's a real person'"

The National Victim Center reports 700,000 women are raped yearly, 22.2 percent are between ages 18 and 24, the same age as many college students.

SG prepares for the fall Senate elections

by JOE CHABUS
Staff writer

More than 50 students will be on the campaign trail next week, all with the same goal in mind: to win one of 50 available senate seats. More than one candidate is running for each seat.

Voting will be Sept. 18-20, from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Students will be able to cast their ballots in voting tents on the green by the Health and Physics Building, the Business and Administration Building and the Education Building.

Senate candidates run from their colleges. The College of Arts and Sciences has the most seats with 18, the College of Business Administration has 10 seats, the College of Engineering has seven seats, the College of Health and Public Affairs has six seats, and the College of Education has five seats.

Additionally, there is one at large seat and each of the area campuses have one seat on the senate.

Election Commissions set guidelines for which those running must adhere. Candidates are only allowed to spend $100 on their campaigns, except for the at large seat, where candidates are able to spend as much as $150 on material. Moreover, candidates are allowed to have two large signs and five stake signs around campus. Campaign material must be kept 15 feet from the voting tents.

"Our main focus is to make sure the election is run fairly. We watch the election material to make sure that there is no slander or other things that would be bad for the election," said Assistant Chief Election Commissioner Kiet Ngo.

is a serious problem that needs to be addressed, and that's what we are doing, helping students to see that not it's okay to force yourself on someone or to blame sexually aggressive behavior on what a person is wearing or drinking. We want students to be responsible," said Erin Brown, co-chair of the UCF Rape Awareness and prevention Network and coordinator of the Peer Education Outreach.

Two additional programs will be featured: "The Verdict," a mock rape trial, and "Streetwise," a self-defense program.

The mock rape trial will be conducted by REACH (Responsible Education and Action for Campus Health).

All attending the trial will be asked to participate as jurors. The trial will be held 8 p.m., Sept. 20, in the Student Center Auditorium.

The "Streetwise" program will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Sept. 21 in the Student Center Auditorium. The program will teach participants how to identify potentially dangerous people and situations.

Participants will be given a quiz to determine their vulnerability to crime and then taught how to defend themselves against attackers. UCF police officers Bob Coch and Terri Pagels are certified in Defense Tactics Instructors and will serve as the instructors for the self-defense segments of the program.

The Greek Column

by LARA GILLEY
Greek columnist

This past week hundreds of UCF students lined Greek Row to participate in Fraternity Rush. Unlike Sorority Rush, both women and men from UCF show up at the Rush parties to meet other students and have a good time.

Of course only the men are actually rushing the Fraternities. It seems the sorority women show up to support the Greek system, according to Denise Welsch of Alpha Xi Delta. Welsch also pointed out that alcohol is not present at the Rush events. It is not just a rule for rush, she feels, "You don't need alcohol to have a good time."

For Fraternity Rush, the Rushies have a Rush Advisor for IFC (Interfraternity Council). Scott Puleo, a Rush Advisor, explain why he enjoys being a Greek, "It just reminded me of the group of guys you grew up in high school with."

During the parties, at each house, the Rushies try to get to know as many brothers as possible while the brothers try to do the same with all of the Rushies. At a Lambda Chi Alpha Rush Party, Doug Whittington, explains, "I moved down here from Virginia and I didn't know anyone. Prior to rush I saw a lot of what went on at college. The people just didn't seem like they were going anywhere. I wanted to be associated with people who were motivated to do something. So I joined Lambda Chi three years ago and I've loved it every step of the way."

Alpha Tau Omega brother, Robert Rodriguez, has very strong feelings on why he chose to go Greek and why others should as well. "I think all gentlemen and young ladies alike are coming out [of high school] and need a sense of direction. They need somewhere where they can have guidance, they need somewhere where they can have a solid foundation backing the educational system that UCF promotes. Sororities and Fraternities are geared toward tomorrow not what we have today. They are not geared toward all the parties and the animal house of the past. The children of tomorrow have a sense of direction. They are relying on each other and that is what sororities and Fraternities are all about."

Other Frat brothers were willing to share how they feel being Greek helps them as well. Kappa Sigma's, Public Relations Chair, Todd Gillick, expressed what he felt being Greek is good for, "The life long friendships that I have made, the connections have just opened up a whole new world of opportunity with activities on campus, student government and leadership within the fraternity."

During Sigma Phi Epsilon's rush party Vice President, Tom Hodge, mentioned how he felt rushing has helped prepare him for the real world. "Rush is like selling a product. I've been through nine rushes and you're selling Sig Ep as a product. That's helped me in my business career and with my interviewing skills."

"There are many pluses to Greek Life that some people are unaware of. One such advantage of being Greek is having such a large network of friends because if I'm having trouble in a class, there is always a brother who has had that class," DJ Hamilton of Sigma Chi points out. "You have older brothers who were in the same position as you who were trying to get through their first two years of college. They've had those classes and basically know how they go. It's really good that you can go to them [the older brothers] for advice."

After being at UCF for a few years, Sigma Alpha Epsilon Brother, Joe Bernisky, has realized something very important, "My first year of school at UCF, in Engineering, they taught me about electrons, atoms, and how everything works but they didn't teach me how to be a person. The Greek system filled that void in there."

This year's fraternity rush has proven to be positive as well. Aaron Clevenger of Delta Upsilon feels this has been their best rush yet. "I am not really sure why this is such a great rush. I think it's because we've matured. After being here three years, we've learned how to do it this time. I think we've matured in our rushing abilities so that we could play with the big boys."

One of the so called big boys is Pi Kappa Alpha. Derek Witherspoon of Pike summed up why he went Greek, "I felt that the Greek system provided a window of opportunity to develop college men academically, socially and professionally."

One last advantage to being Greek at UCF, Hal Orensky of Phi Delta Theta states, "There is no life on this campus without Greeks, and I wanted to be alive on campus."

Once you think about it, Orensky may be on to something. Greeks please keep in touch. I am sure everyone had a great rush so now it is time to move on to other subjects. Tell me about your study hours and everyone's goals for GPA's, and about your pledge programs. E-mail me at Lgilley@skynet.oir.ucf.edu

Student Government Senate elections are coming up, how are you going to decide on who to vote for?

"I will vote based on their stand on ethical values."

John Turner
History (Senior)

"I'll take a collaboration of the fliers and the population's opinion of the people and then I'll make my own opinion. I'll vote for someone who's out for the student's welfare and not to make money for the school."

Marisa Dragash

"I am going to choose how to vote for senator by whoever is most qualified for the job. I am going to read their fliers, listen to people I know and talk to the candidates in person."

Elon Booth

"I would decide on who to vote for based on the results of what I see around the campus and I see nothing. Actions speak to me, not words."

Two women and a baby—love is love

☐ Alana realizes that there's more to Family Values than empty facades of an upstanding image.

Alana Kelly
THE FEMALE SIDE

Lets face it, in today's society the "traditional family" is scarce. How many people do you know whose biological parents are still together and happy? Our society has changed, and we are responsible for changing it.

I would like to share with you a conversation that turned into an argument between my brother and me. I was telling my mother a story about a four-year-old girl who was being taught how to water-ski by her parents. My brother interrupted by saying, "Aren't they the two women who had a baby together?" When I replied yes, he said, "Oh that's a fine up-bringing for that little girl!" I thought for a moment and with a great deal of fortitude I said, "THAT little girl has two parents who show her more love and give her more attention than most children get these days. Shouting, he said, "They are raising her to be gay and that is not right." Smiling, I replied, "No, they are raising her to be her own person and not judge people for the way they choose to live their life, and maybe if more people raised their children that way there wouldn't be so much hate and prejudice in our society." My brother, being a divorced young father of a five-year-old, knew exactly what I was referring to. He turned and left the room.

Love, patience and education are three of the most important attributes we can give our children today. The two women I have referred to have done just that. They first established a profiting business and then bought a beautiful home. After seven years of contemplating the idea of a baby, they did it. I have to admit I wondered how they would explain their relationship with one another to the child and at what age would the child be able to understand. Being the person that I am, I asked. They told me, "A family is a gift of love, and that is what we intend to show our baby."

I was there for the baby shower. Seeing all of the beautiful cards with encouraging and supportive words from friends and family helped me believe this was going to be a wonderful experience for them. I was there for the birth. I remember holding the newborn little girl, looking down at her, my eyes filled with tears thinking, what a miracle. How blessed this little girl is to have two loving parents. I was there for her first birthday party along with all of her grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins. She was surrounded with love and commitment. She has grown into a beautiful, caring and funny little girl.

This story is about two women who decided not to live their life in darkness. Instead, they chose to walk proudly in the light. In doing so they brought a child into this world, showered her with love and instilled in her a high self-esteem. WHAT A FINE UP-BRINGING FOR THAT LITTLE GIRL.

I am sure there are many people out there that would agree with my little brother and those are the people I truly feel sorry for. Society has held them prisoner to the old, to the oblivious, to the unchangeable pattern of thoughts in their minds. Relax, people! Live life for what you make of it and let others be proud of their accomplishments as they see them.

Meet the Writer

I find it very difficult to write about myself, so bare with me on the lack of self-possession. I guess I should start with the basis of my education. I remember first grade as if it were yesterday. My teacher was very strict. If we were loud and disruptive, she would make the entire class line-up around the room with our faces toward the wall standing on our tip-toes. If we came down from our tip-toes, she would paddle us with a very large weapon. Can you even imagine school being like that today?

When second grade came, I was in a blur. I knew something big was happening, but I didn't quite understand the meaning of integration. I only knew that my parents were very upset. Two days after school started my parents removed me from public school and registered me in a Southern Baptist school. Wow, what a difference. I will never forget this one particular Bible study class. They showed us films of when the world came to an end, and if you were not saved your head was cut off or you were burned to death. At this time I was a third grader, and you can believe the following Sunday in church my butt was saved.

Fifth grade through high school I attended Indian River Academy. I was definitely a "C" student. My parents were very proud my senior year when I was voted class clown. At least it explained the "C" average.

At 18, I found the world. Being in a private school, which seemed all my life, I felt cheated. I wanted to see what life was really like, unsheltered. I found such life—lucky for me I made it through alive. The shock of reality sent me back to school. I received my A.A. Degree in 1994, and I am currently seeking a Bachelor's Degree in Organizational Communications at UCF.

Being brought up in a prejudiced environment, I rebelled and became the person I am today. When I write, I will always refer to things that I have experienced first-hand. I am a strong believer in healing the world—so to speak. Although I am not a mother, and probably never will be, I am considered by my friends as motherly. I am always quick to give advice and for some odd reason people accept it with gratitude. I am terrible at accepting compliments, but I love to give them. Through writing I feel I express my feelings easily and openly.

Perot for President—a few reasons why

For certain Americans who are disenchanted with the government (that might be everyone, right?), the search for a presidential messiah who will deliver us from politics-as-usual has ended with H. Ross Perot.

It is easy to see why Perot garnered so much support in 1992, and he might just get it again in 1996. Why? He isn't a politician. He is not interested in playing politicians' games. He champions hard work, ethics, curbing lobby groups' influence and favors a limited, efficient government. When have we heard that from a politician?

A registered Independent, I voted for the irrepressible Texas billionaire in 1992. Considering the damage to America that Bill Clinton hath wrought, I can sleep at night knowing that I didn't help put him in office.

But will Perot run for president again? He seems to be keeping us in suspense. That troubles those of us who frown on the two-party system and its candidates. And why not? In nearly every election in recent history, we have had to choose the lesser of two evils instead one of two decent candidates. Who isn't fed up with the Democratic Party's high taxes, Big Government and welfare state? Who isn't weary of the Republican Party's underwhelming environmental protection record and its handful of bigoted members who give it a bad name?

Joseph Nadeau NOT-SO-LIBERAL

Perot, who appears to be in touch with people, embodies the American Dream. He started out humbly but meteorically rose to billionaire status by creating Electronic Data Systems (EDS). His political watchdog group United We Stand supports reforming and limiting government, eliminating the deficit, limiting terms of career politicians and lowering taxes. Most of its members, defying the "right-winger" stereotype, are suspicious of the Religious Right. With such credentials as these, how can Perot not win over a substantial body of voters?

Critics contend that Perot may not be president material because, as a no-nonsense businessman, he may be too inflexible to deal with Congress and checks on his power. Add to that the fact that running as an Independent means riding in on a dark horse; not many people know what to make of this now-you-see-it-now-you-don't party in Washington. Independent candidates surface every now and then: George Wallace in 1968, John Anderson in 1980, and Perot in 1992. The Independent Party wants to be a force to contend with, and if Perot or Colin Powell run for president on that ticket, it just might be.

In mid-August, there was a United We Stand conference in Dallas in which Perot supporters expressed their disinterest in Bob Dole and justifiable disdain of Clinton. The possibility of Clinton getting re-elected scares me, but it may be unlikely, for Perot has rightly bashed this fraud who resides in the Red House (sorry, White House). Perhaps frustrated with the Democrats, Perot advised voters to put Republicans in Congress in 1994. That was sage advice if I've ever heard it.

But will Perot run? I have read that certain supporters don't want him to; they would prefer it if he remained at the helm of United We Stand, keeping an eye on politicians. In his book United We Stand: How We Can Take Back Our Country, Perot addresses readers: "You are the owners of this country. Nobody else can do the job. Our system has been corrupted because we weren't exercising our responsibilities as owners."

So true.

Executive vetos in SGA

Kevin Koenig GUEST COLUMNIST

Dr. Levestor Tubbs is up to his old tricks again. This time he refuses to allow the placement of three SGA Constitutional Amendments on the fall ballot for student approval.

The first amendment would have removed the Student Government Vice President from the office of Senate President. The Second one would have placed the office of Senate President in the Constitution, thus filling the void created by the first amendment. The third one would have changed "published in the major student publication" to "published in a major student publication." This was suggested because there is more than one student publication on campus.

The Student Senate passed the above mentioned amendments by more than a two-thirds vote. According to our constitution, the next step would have been to advertise the amendment and then put it on the ballot for the students to vote on. If more than fifty percent of the students voted for the amendment, it would then go to Tubbs for his signature.

The Executive Branch, who is supposed to execute the amendment if ratified by the students and signed by Tubbs, decided it could veto the amendment before it was presented to the Students.

The third amendment passed the Senate, and the Executive Branch even signed it. But Levestor Tubbs took out his ink pad, like he has done so many times in the past, and vetoed it. Tubbs believes the student body could not make an informed decision on whether or not to change "the" to "a." Come on Lee, students are not that stupid. And as for the first two amendments, I bet that Student Government could have educated the students in FIVE weeks. I wish Student Government's caretaker was more of a facilitator and less of an obstructionist.

Enough about Tubbs, let's talk about a tuition increase. Yes, believe it or not, the administration wants to dive deeper into your pockets. They evidently did not raise enough money with all of the new fees they added this semester, so they will be coming back for more. I will keep you informed of what is going on as soon as I find out.

I would like to encourage everyone to vote in the Senate elections. Students need strong representation in Student Government now more than ever.

or sober writers" Volume 28, No. 1, page 19. Get real!

Now I know that all I've uncovered here may be a bit cynical, but I can offer some positive criticism—compared to the InPrint, your page designs are exceptional, your grammar and readability are excellent, and the quality of your publication (in a physical sense) is superior. They, however, have a crucial element that you despairingly lack, PERSONALITY!

Luckily for you, the semester is young and you still have time to re-invent yourselves, but until then I will be deeply unsatisfied.

EDITORIAL RESPONSE:

I'm just thrilled to get a letter to the editor. My deepest apologies for not being opinionated enough for your taste. I myself would love to have MORE opinionated articles to publish. However, I do think that Brynner is quite opinionated, and so is Dan. But in all fairness, I'm not sure you had a chance to read Dan's article before you wrote or mine. I think David is quite amusing. So, on that we'll have to agree to disagree. I appreciate your compliment on our page layouts. On that subject I agree with you wholeheartedly.

Not funny? I'll tell you what's not funny

David Swartz, Jr. A LITTLE TWIST

This week at the American Humor Institute of CA, we will be writing about humor, with special attention given to what is funny, and what is not. Let's start with what is not funny. This probes into a complicated aspect of funniness: Humor Morals. Humor Morals are about as hard to pin down as Family Values, but there are a few subjects that one should never poke fun at. Some topics hit below the belt.

The first such topic is a person's medical condition. If you were to see someone in a wheelchair, it would be considered rude in this country to follow that person around all day and constantly make paraplegic-related jokes. You should also never mention, for instance, that someone is missing an eyeball, leg or three-quarters of his head. It's just common courtesy.

That concept is explained in Humor Moral #1: Jokes about medical disorders and diseases are tasteless (except for diseases whose name starts with some sort of animal and then "pox"—as in cow pox, chicken pox and llama pox). These medical problems, for reasons beyond my explanation, are comical.

The second thing that a humorist shouldn't make fun of is religion. It's not that religion isn't funny, it's just that some people tend to get deeply offended when you joke about their religion. If you make a little quip about a person's religion, they'll usually begin to preach at you, explain how you have sinned and eventually condemn you to Hell. In certain areas of South Florida they'll actually put a curse on you.

Humor Moral #2: NEVER ridicule or joke about a faith or religion, unless it's clearly a really dumb one wherein they worship Michael Bolton or John Tesh.

Another subject that should not be jested upon is poor or homeless people. It's just not nice to go around joking and pointing at poor people or those on welfare, unless of course they just bought a new Ford Thunderbird with food stamps. In that case, feel free to say anything you wish.

But even though there are a few exceptions, teasing or playing pranks on a homeless person caught outside in the rain or sleeping in a gutter is thought by most people to be somewhat impolite. For example, if you were riding down the road and saw a derelict taking a nap in the gutter, it would be unmannerly to run him over. Again, it's just common courtesy.

Humor Moral #3: It's not funny to run over homeless people, even if you do have the right-of-way.

Another topic that you should DEFINITELY stay away from joking about is the abortion issue. Abortion is one VERY touchy subject. If someone were to tell the joke about the duck, Jeffrey Dahmer and the abortion doctor to a group of extremists on either side of the issue, that person's body would soon have many, many bullet holes in it.

Humor Moral and General All-Around Good Idea #4: Stay away from abortion banter. Let's never speak of that subject again.

If one learns to follow these simple Humor Morals, the number of subpoenas received should be greatly reduced. By now you're wondering, "There are so many things that aren't funny and I can't joke about; tell me, what IS funny?"

Determining what is funny can be as complicated as figuring out what isn't funny. In fact, that topic deserves a column all to itself, which gives you an idea as to what Tuesday's column will be about.

Due to space restraints, there is one Humor Moral which I had to exclude: Humor Moral #5: The joke about O.J. Simpson and Christopher Reeve is very tasteless and crude. Never say it in public unless you're truly sick-minded. (E-mail me if you want to hear it, though) *Hey look! An Interactive Columnist! E-mail me at david.swartz@outdoor.com and tell me if you can taste a difference between butter and margarine.

You guys should really be ashamed of this rag you call a newspaper. I'm not sure of the direction that Sean Perry is aiming to take The Future, whether he'll continue to publish frivolous and synthetic fluff along with cowardly coverage of SGA and the Greek Council. He should really consider returning to the Entertainment Editor's position. Your Editorial Section is a joke! Both of David Swartz Jr.'s attempts were fruitless, unavailing assaults at comedy. He should return to California where his piteousness may be admired as humor. His article "Welcome to fall term" was complete and utter nonsense. Brynner W. Yee's effort "Constitutional protection for the U.S. flag" was vain and extremely fusty. Yee needs to learn to think for himself and stop imitating his conservative heroes. By the way, it's my right to be unpatriotic!

At least Dave Bauer, the former Future editor, was brave enough to take some risks and present an opinionated publication. What I've read thus far is hopelessly inferior.

Another grievance that I have is that while you provide a safe and relatively trite publication, you try and present yourselves with a hip, progressive image. Evidence: "Wanted: storied Hello, hello, hello. I'm back after a short break ready to give you more music info than you could ever care to know.

If you are into acid jazz get your butt to Sapphire Friday and Saturday night to check out What It Is, a jazz, funk and soul outfit. You've got two days to check them out so don't miss 'em.

Blues guitarist Sonny Landreth will hit the Sapphire the very next day, bringing his fiery brand of blues guitar to Orlando. He's been featured in Guitar Player and Guitar World magazine in recent months as well as more mainstream publications. If you play guitar to want check this guy out. He'll tear your head off.

Is it just me or has the MTV music video awards show turned into one, big waste of time. The whole thing stunk from beginning to end, but the worst parts had to be the pre-show and post show interviews. I mean, did we really need a Courtney Love/Madonna interview. The only thing more sickening than staring at Kurt Loder for 15 minutes, is looking at Loder next to Love's cellulite-ridden ass for five minutes. To top it off, Loder tried to involve himself in Flea and Anthony's post show goofing and made a fool of himself. Keep that guy behind the news desk.

I caught Cage of Hands at Barbarella Wednesday. Look for a story on them in a couple of issues.

Red Red Meat, my favorite Chicago band, have a new album coming out in October, and I can't wait to get my grubby paws on it. I heard they devastated all in attendance at the CMJ last week, which I'm sure made the big boys at Warner and Sub Pop happy. Hopefully they'll head our way real soon.

Theatre Downtown takes extreme 'Measures'

by LAURA BUNDY
Theater critic

Measure for Measure has long been considered one of Shakespeare's most difficult plays, as much for audiences as its performers. Rather than focusing on timeless universal themes (love, death), as Shakespeare's more popular plays, Measure finds its conflicts in social issues, involving politics and religion. The play's plot is moved along by such unpleasant devices as "the bed trick," possibly more acceptable in the 17th century, in which the villain believes himself to be seducing the heroine, when another woman has been substituted for her. Further, it features neither the joie de vivre or lovable characters of the bard's lighter comedies.

This does not make Measure for Measure a bad play. The language of the work creates many moments that are both moving and beautiful. However, the script's difficulties, when confronted by a director attempting to create something more palatable, seem to inspire extreme reactions. Such is the case with director Bobbie Bell's vision of the play at Theatre Downtown.

Set in Vienna in the year 1999, Bell's Measure takes place against a backdrop of crime, depravity and fascism. In this incarnation, the villain, Angelo, is the leader of a puritanical military party. The Sisterhood of Saint Clare, where we find the heroine, Isabella, is a feminist order of nuns which shuns the paternalistic Catholic Church in 1997. We learn this from the extensive program notes, which explain that "following the economic crash of '98, the fabric of Viennese society has been rent between the forces of anarchy and totalitarianism."

It seems that Bell's solution to the unpleasantness of Measure's plot was to place it in a world pushed to its most jagged edges, where the questionable moral choices of its characters would seem more like survival than sin. When asked about the harshness of the play on opening night, Bell responded, "It was just waiting for the 20th century."

The 20th century has come with a fury to this production, and while the setting illuminates some aspects of the dark comedy, it too frequently takes on a life of its own. The program notes are very long, giving summaries of both the setting and of various organizations in the play, one of which did not even exist in Shakespeare's original. A detailed timeline occupying half of one program page explains the political events leading up to the production, beginning "1996—Austrian Secessionist Movement sets up City State of Vienna." Perhaps if that much information is required to support the resetting of a play, it is best left in the original form.

For we find that, too often, it is hard to find this play behind the setting. In the opening of the show, so much energy is spent absorbing what the director has to communicate about his world that it's easy to miss what Shakespeare is saying about the plot and characters. The play's best moments are achieved in spite of the setting, rather than because of it.

Most of those moments belong to Paul M. Wegman, playing the very human Duke Vincentio. Audiences will remember Wegman as Flan in last year's excellent Six Degrees of Separation. He is a comforting, tough and witty presence as the Duke, and shows us the most likeable side of a role which is often compared to Prospero but is less endearing. Also notable are Mark March and Michael Bradley for their very funny, although occasionally heavy-handed, portrayals of Lucio and Pompey, respectively. Alyssa Simon is radiant in the smaller role of Mariana.

Ultimately, a number of good performances and well-written exchanges prevent the atmosphere of all-out attack on the audience's senses. The last scene, in which the villain is punished and the loyal are rewarded, reminds us why Shakespeare is easy to enjoy. While this no-holds-barred production of a difficult play may not appeal to all Shakespeare buffs or even regular theatre-goers, it is worth seeing for the interesting staging, Wegman's powerful and studied performance and the absolute beauty of the playwright's language. Measure for Measure, directed by Bobbie Bell, plays at Theatre Downtown through Oct. 7. For reservations and information, call 841-0083.

'Women Behind Bars'

by CINDY ELAVSKY
Staff writer

SEE—doctors transform man to woman. SEE—an orgy of the dead. In the 1950's, these words flashed across movie screens. Audiences were titillated by bad acting, bad writing and bad direction. If it weren't for these movies, Mystery Science Theater 3000 would have nothing to make fun of. Manhattan South Studio Theatre (the theatre that brought us The Brady Bunch: Uncensored) does just that in their production of Women Behind Bars, a satirical look at these 1950 B-movie gems.

The play begins in the Greenwich Village Women's House of Detention with a riot and an attempted jailbreak. The uprising is squelched by the Matron of the jail, played by Chuck Swafford. We are introduced to the diverse cast of characters with (purposely) stereotypical character traits. Blanche (Sallie Glaner) is the Mississippi debutante who wears crinoline under her prison skirt. Cheri (Rose Marston) is the squeaky-voiced prostitute ala Marilyn Monroe. Granny (Sandy Starr) is the matriarchal veteran who is serving 42 years for murdering nine husbands. Ada (Joanie Melekian) is the maniacal pyromaniac who spouts prophecies and gibberish as a result of being placed in solitary confinement one too many times.

Soon, Mary-Eleanor (Shaye Cahill), who is as pure as the driven snow, is introduced as the newest inmate. Her new inmates welcome her by raping her with a broom handle and a condom. Gloria (Rebecca Wicks) tells her it was nothing against her, it was merely an initiation. The plot thickens.

The play tracks Mary-Eleanor's seven-year stay in prison. She becomes fast friends with her new inmates and unwillingly develops an intimacy with the Matron. We soon find out that most of the inmates have some sort of relationship with the Matron. We also find out very early that the Matron is bad, and the inmates are good.

Mary-Eleanor becomes pregnant as a result of off-stage intercourse with her husband, Paul (Jason Baerhold), and the Matron (I know, it's confusing). The women try to hide the pregnancy from the Matron, but soon after Mary-Eleanor gives birth, the Matron takes the baby away.

Guadalupe, played by Leslie Ramos, receives a chicken as a gift, but the chicken is discovered by the Matron and is taken away. As Guadalupe's punishment, her hair is cut off.

This is not a very nice Matron. Something has to be done.

John G. Peros has created an ensemble of actors who work well off one another on an intimate stage. The small stage and few set furnishings provide well for the cramped, locked-in feeling of an over-crowded jail cell. Mr. Peros directs his actors in such a way that each movement has a reason behind it, and that reason is usually to draw laughs. The actors make full use of the tiny stage; after the first few scenes, you realize the size of the set is an asset, not a hindrance.

The action is fast-paced and frantic. Some jokes go over the audience's heads, and some slap them in their faces. Either way, it is certainly entertaining.

The finest performances of the play are given by the inmates. Shaye Cahill's Mary-Eleanor is sticky-sweet with wide-eyed wonder. Even after her lobotomy, she remains innocently naive. Sallie Glaner is the perfect Blanche; her accent and strolling gait are wonderfully Southern. When the doctor tells her she has to stop living in a fantasy world and face reality, she responds, "How can I without a protective makeup?" After a few scenes, Rebecca Wicks warms into her role of Gloria and presents a strong, supporting character.

As the Doctor, Ray Zayas draws a few laughs with his physical comedy, as does Chuck Swafford. However, it is clear that the play belongs to the women.

The sharp wit of Tom Eyen's script is actually the star of the show. One-liners and absurd situations rule the play, and the actors go all out to present these in the truest, most hilarious fashion. Satire is always a motive and always achieved.

If you're expecting a night of elegant theatre, Women Behind Bars would not be your choice. But, if you want raunchy, in-your-face fun, check it out. The play runs until Sept. 23, and tickets range from six to eight dollars. Call Manhattan South Studio at 895-6557 for info and reservations.

Video Rewind

reviews of the freshest flicks on video

★ The Jerky Boys

(R, Touchstone, Sept. 12)

The masters of marketing a crank call need a few lessons in filmmaking. The first 20 minutes—some laughs. The rest—a downhill crapcapade. Jokes got old, real fast. Script was tiresome and withered with plot scenarios that were simply shameless.

★★ 1/2 Major Payne

(PG-13, MCA/Universal, Sept. 12)

Damon Wayans is Major Payne and he deals best with pain. Wayans plays the soldier whose run out of missions. So the only job left is to teach a bunch of military school punks about the army.

Payne is a simple comedy. The story stays close to the kids with Payne and the relationships he has with the them. There are some funny sequences which make crafty use of older drill sergeant cliches and Wayans carries himself well. And, he holds up the wisecracks for the entirety of the film.

The writing is strong and imaginative. Just wait till you hear Wayans' war-inspired version of "The Little Engine That Could."

★★★★ Pulp Fiction

(R, Miramax, Sept. 12)

Quentin Tarantino's second directorial achievement is another masterpiece of extensive character analysis and a collage of beautifully choreographed violence. Like his first film, Reservoir Dogs, Pulp, in its prime, is gut-wrenchingly sick, as well as twisted and insanely funny. Career performances by Samuel L. Jackson and John Travolta and an Oscar for Tarantino's screenplay.

★★ 1/2 Jefferson in Paris

(PG-13, Touchstone, Sept. 19)

Nick Nolte sang in I'll Do Anything and Hollywood cut most of his scenes. Now in Jefferson in Paris, he dons a wig as Thomas Jefferson. They won't cut him out here but video is about the only place to catch his journey through Paris, a city in the middle of a revolution.

Nolte and Scacchi heat up Jefferson in Paris.

Co-starring Greta Scacchi and Thadine Newton, Jefferson is primarily a love story but is disguised as a historical drama. Nolte grows on you but is still hard to believe as the slave-conscience master. The romances are like standing water, never going away, but always there.

Jefferson is racy in its tone but most shocking is the historical perception of our third President you'll get while watching.

★★★ 1/2 The Madness of King George

(R, Hallmark, Sept. 19)

The strength of The Madness of King George feeds off the outpouring of versatility and desire to provoke emotion from Nigel Hawthorne, who plays King George—sheer brilliance.

A sarcastic comedy with serious tones, Madness mixes it up with

countless weird acts involving blue piss and farting. The film falls when Hawthorne is absent but awakens when he re-enters.

Backed by a blazing, miraculously appealing soundtrack, Madness is an admiring picture which makes a mockery of the Royal Family. Nigel's Oscar nomination was a worthy one. Long live the king.

★★ Losing Isaiah

(PG-13, Paramount, Sept. 19)

In the spirit of the Sunday Night Movie, Losing Isaiah's plot is thin and ill-mannered. Not leaving too much to the imagination, Isaiah goes from crying mothers to courtroom outbursts and in between some cute little shots of a ball-capped Isaiah.

The kid is adorable and Sam Jackson walks through his role as a braveheart lawyer. Losing Isaiah is just as interesting as watching a real custody battle. And, the winner still loses.

Also due out 9/12-9/19:

Golden Knights shine against FIU, 4-1

by JOE JUDKOWITZ
Staff writer

Although it was a cloudy Sunday afternoon, the Golden Knights shined against Trans American Athletic Conference rival Florida International University Golden Panthers.

With the victory over FIU 4-1, the Golden Knights move to 3-1 overall this season while maintaining first place in the TAAC with a record of 3-0. The Golden Panthers fall to 2-2 overall and 1-2 in the TAAC.

"FIU is traditionally a pretty reputable program not only in the TAAC but in the Southern Region," said head coach Karen Richter. "They have been regionally ranked before as well as ranked nationally."

The Golden Knights wasted no time when midfielder Kelly Stout chipped the ball into the back of the net over Golden Panther goalkeeper Martine Materasso in the 9th minute of play.

Forward Sarah Kane scored in the 24th minute to give the Golden Knights a 2-0 lead in the first half. Midfielder Amy Jones and O'Connor were credited with the assist.

"Our attack was a lot more creative than it has been this season," said Richter.

The Golden Knights lead grew to 3-0 when O'Connor was the receiver instead of the passer in the 48th minute when she chipped the ball over a charging goalkeeper early in the second half. Defenseman Christy Parham assisted in the play.

"Jennifer O'Connor played very, very well this game," stressed Richter. "She really stepped it up a level this game."

Forward Kelly Shrum got involved in the scoring attack as well when she headed a throw in into the net in the 80th minute. The Knight throwing the ball in was defenseman Michele Harris.

"We were able to attack with more people which made a big difference," said Richter.

FIU did have one bright spot in the game. Midfielder Jennifer Lieb put one by goalkeeper Allysa O'Brien in the 82nd minute.

"We played solid defense with the exception of the one breakdown at the goal," reiterated Richter.

In the 85th minute Jennifer O'Connor almost scored her second goal on a break away but was brought down from behind by Golden Panther midfielder Kym Kendall. Kendall was ejected from the game when she received a red card. For the rest of the game the Golden Knights had a man advantage but could not capitalize.

The Knights will pack its bags and travel to Arkansas for the Arkansas Adidas Classic on September 16th and 17th. They will not be home again until the 28th of September.

UCF loses to Clemson, but downs Wofford

by TRAVIS BELL
Staff writer

After struggling to a disappointing 0-2 start in its own soccer classic, the UCF (1-3) men's soccer team hit the road for a pair of games. Losses to Radford and Coastal Carolina were rough enough, but then the Knights had to visit the national powerhouse Clemson Tigers.

Clemson, ranked third in the nation by ISAA, defeated UCF handily 3-0. The Tigers took a 1-0 halftime lead on a goal in the 31st minute. Things did not get better for the Knights in the second half. The Tigers struck again in the 63rd minute and finished off the victory with its third goal in the 85th minute of the game.

The Golden Knights could never get any momentum going as was indicative by shots on goal, advantage to the Tigers 17-6. The loss dropped UCF to 0-3 on the young season.

"The players have reacted very positively to the slow start," said coach Bob Winch. "Our three losses have come to very good teams."

UCF then headed to Spartanburg, SC, to face the Wofford University Terriers. UCF dominated the game throughout, over-powering the Terriers for a 4-1 victory.

"The major difference between the first and fourth games were that the players have finally settled in and we have settled on a consistent lineup," said Winch.

Frederik Petterson gave UCF the halftime lead with a late goal in the 40th minute. Andy Marin notched the assist on Petterson's goal, and then Lars Andersen scored an unassisted goal in the 59th minute to give the Golden Knights a 2-0 lead in the second half. Andersen's goal was the eventual game winner.

Wofford struck back, cutting the UCF lead in half 2-1 on a goal in the 60th minute of play. The Golden Knights' final goal came in the 88th minute from Daniel Schloss to seal the victory. UCF dominated its first win, controlling the shots on goal 28-4.

"Congress has voted to cut the student loan program by $10 billion over the next seven years.

Rather than targeting the subsidies and handouts that the government gives to banks and loan agencies, they have targeted the students for ALL of the cuts to the loan program.

In doing so, Congress is attempting to shift the burden of public debt to the backs of private citizens (students with college loans).

Specifically, Congress voted on measures to cut student loans, Pell Grants, SSIG, SEOG, College Work Study, and to eliminate many other programs.

These are the student aid programs that have helped millions of Americans realize their dream of a college education."

A week off should help UCF players get healthy for FSU

by JUSTIN DELIAS
Assistant sports editor

The University of Central Florida Golden Knights football team has a bye this week before playing in the biggest game in UCF history against FSU on September 23. Although there is no game on Saturday, the Knights are still practicing this week in an abbreviated form. Instead of the normal three hour practices, things will be wrapped up in two, but there will still be plenty of work in preparation for the number one team in the nation.

On the subject of number one, UCF has the dubious distinction of playing two number one teams back-to-back, making UCF an anomaly to say the least. The Knights play FSU, which is currently the number one ranked team in Division I-A football, and then travel to McNeese State, the number one ranked Division I-AA team the following week. It is an event that has never happened before for a school, and probably will not happen again. Nonetheless, the extra practice this week is more than needed as the Knights prepare for this arduous task.

The extra rest will also help as far as injuries are concerned.

Returning to the starting lineup will be linebacker John Bryant. The defense will be further helped by the return of cornerback Louis Lubin and defensive tackle Curtis Dix, which will add much needed depth to the rotation. Cornell Green will also be back to spell relief as a backup to offensive tackle Kevin Stewart. Receiver Stuart Stype is practicing again with the team after suffering a knee injury and is expected to be ready as a backup for the FSU game.

Out for the Knights will be receiver Rufus Hall, lost in last Saturday's game to a torn ACL in his left knee. Fortunately, center Chris Wrenn, who also went out in Saturday's game, will be ready to play against FSU.

"The 'Big Uglies' are always a little beat up," head coach Gene McDowell said jokingly about the offensive line. "But they're always ready to go."

With Todd Cleavland out for academics and the recent injury to Rufus Hall, Eddie Keyes is the only receiver with experience among a receiving core with three freshmen, and he is taking his new role seriously.

"I'm trying to be first in everything," explained Keyes. "I'm trying to lead them by example."

The injury situation is not really of concern for McDowell or Keyes, as both feel confident with the job coach Wes Chandler has done.

"Coach Chandler has prepared all of our receivers to be almost interchangeable," continued Keyes.

Injuries or not, the show must go on and UCF must be prepared for FSU. No need to worry though, since McDowell and FSU head coach Bobby Bowden are old friends and golf buddies. McDowell is going to see if Bowden will spot the Knights a handicap of about 49 points.

"I feel about this game as if I were going to go to the Masters and meet up with the best friend I've ever had that I love to play golf with," explained McDowell, jokingly with a big grin. "And I want to beat my friend's ass if I can. But he's obviously got a better handicap than I've got."

UCF Invitational should help Wentworth gauge the Golden Knights progress

definitely moving in the right direction. Mansur-Wentworth came to UCF last December from USF, where she served for three years as an assistant coach. She says this year's team, "has a great attitude, they are supportive of each other and it has resulted in a good team atmosphere."

In return, the runners have nothing but positive feedback for her.

"Our coach is really good," said Hill. Lipham added that she is "the best coach we've had here."

The first test for the cross-country team comes on September 15 when they are host to the UCF Invitational, which starts at 6:00 p.m. on UCF's track.

"Florida's women's team on paper look unbeatable," Mansur-Wentworth said. "If we can get by everyone except UF, possibly get our top runners in Florida's top five, then that would be great."

"Every other TAAC school better look out this year," said Lipham. "The Knights have quality. It is not unrealistic for both the men's and women's teams to win the conference and go even further."

It looks like Golden Knights football isn't the only UCF sport looking up this season.

ENOUGH SAID!!

The wonderful sport who inspired the wild card is back for it's third week of gridiron combat and wonderfully for you, the fanatical football freak, I have been enlisted as your tour guide. Be assured that the betting lines are here for amusement purposes only, and not to advocate gambling. If you buy that, please don't gamble, you might get suckered into believing the Bills have something left. If you do, however, use my picks for your football pool, I expect a share of the profits. With that said, it's game time!

SANDIEGO CHARGERS (0-1) @ PHILADELPHIA EAGLES (0-1) Eagles favored by 3. The defending AFC champions rely on Natrone Means to bowl over opposing defenses. A revamped Philly defensive line has to search deep within themselves to stop the massive running back. UCF alum Shawn Jefferson has become the featured wideout of Stan Humphries. They hook up to burn Philly's secondary, but it isn't enough..... Philadelphia 24 San Diego 20.

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS (0-1) @ BUFFALO BILLS (0-1) Bills favored by 2. Buffalo drags its stars out of the Old Folks home for an outing at Rich Stadium to battle the up-and-coming Colts. Marshall Faulk stumbled out of the gate, but now looks like he can run circles around Buffalo's defense. With a quarterback controversy brewing up in Indy, ex-Buc Craig Erickson hopes Sean Dawkins catches enough of his passes to keep him as the starter. Thurman Thomas runs carries the ball well but it's obvious his best days are behind him..... Indianapolis 27 Buffalo 16.

OAKLAND RAIDERS (1-0) @ KANSAS CITY CHIEFS (1-0) Chiefs favored by 3.

The silver and black attack looks like it's back. However, Kansas City isn't the type of creme puff team the Raiders are used to devouring. Steve Bono apparently learned something from that guy Joe before taking over at QB. It's obvious he definitely learned who his main target should be. The Willie Davis and Lake Dawson show continues, as Greg Hill continues his growth as an NFL running back. Raider running back Harvey Williams couldn't run a token booth, much less a football. Rookie Napoleon Kaufman bails him out, but can't bail out L.A., uh, Oakland..... Kansas City 23 Oakland 14.

CLEVELAND BROWNS (1-0) @ HOUSTON OILERS (1-0) Browns favored by 7.

Games like this shouldn't be played. It's like matching some recreational league hoops team against the Rockets. Unfortunately for Houston, it's their turn to burden the handicap. Who's Chris Chandler? No offense means no points, especially against a vicious Dawg Pound defense. Andre Rison and Michael Jackson will be so open that even color blind Vinny Testaverde will spot them. Expect to see Eric Zeier in mop up duty sometime in this game, and that's not a good thing for the Oilslicks. Where's that smoke coming from? Oh, it's just the Oiler secondary getting burned..... Cleveland 34 Houston 3.

Rams favored by 1.

It's not easy to tell who the expansion team is in this match up of NFL lowlives. The folks in Carolina are licking their chops in anticipation of facing something with as much (or as little) talent as they have. QB Frank Reich hooks up with former Bill buddies Don Beebe and Pete Metzelaars, while mixing in the run by handing off to tailback Randy Baldwin. Who's Randy Baldwin? The Rams will be asking the same question, and wondering how to stop him. They might even consider sending worthless washout running back Jerome Bettis in exchange for him..... Carolina 16 St. Louis 14.

ATLANTA FALCONS (1-0) @ NEW ORLEANS SAINTS (0-1) Saints favored by 4.

If two NFL franchises could ever be proclaimed as cosmic twins, they would definitely be these two teams. Neither has ever been to a Super Bowl, they've suffered through long periods of futility chasing the 49ers, have head coaches who are constantly criticized and second guessed and have quarterbacks starting their second year with the club in Jim Everett of the Saints and Jeff George of Atlanta. This NFC West showdown should see the wide receiving corps cancel each other out, while neither team has much of a running game. The difference in this game will turn out to be the one thing they don't have in common: Kicker Morten Andersen, the former Saint kicking legend now booting field goals for the Falcons. He'll decide this game..... Atlanta 24 New Orleans 22.

ARIZONA CARDINALS (0-1) @ DETROIT LIONS (0-1) Lions favored by 6. Sparks are sure to fly in the Motor City as Gen. Buddy Ryan leads his defensive-minded Cardinals into the Silverdome against Barry Sanders and the Lions, who might actually have learned how to play defense this year. Lion quarterback Scott

Mitchell is still trying to prove he is worth the money Detroit dished out to get him. Wide receivers Herman Moore and Johnny Morton will do everything they can to help him do that. In his way is the Arizona mercenary defense, who can't possibly be expected to lead a Cardinal victory without an offense. After all can you name me one effective offensive player for Arizona besides no-name receivers ride into 'Frisco with hopes of burning the Deionless secondary. Rookie waterbug-back Curtis Martin continues to impress. However, the combination of Steve Young to Jerry Rice, John Taylor, Brent Jones and William Floyd prevail in the end. I hate those !@#*! I hope I'm wrong on this one..... San Francisco 31 New England 27.

CINCINNATI BENGALS (1-0) @ SEATTLE SEAHAWKS (0-1) Seahawks favored by 1. Poor Brian Blades. Troubles just keep mounting up with him with the manslaughter charge filed against him. I'm sure Seahawk coach Dennis Erickson is pleased to have a Miami alum like him on his side going into a battle with red hot Sanford bred QB Jeff Blake and the Bengals. Rick Mirer will be happy to have him in the lineup along with rookie wide out Joey Galloway as they hook up to kill Cincy.

Boy, do they blow them away! Seattle really murders them..... Seattle 34 Cincinnati 17.

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS (0-1) @ NEW YORK JETS (0-1) Jets favored by 4.

This has got to be the ugliest game in the history of football. Honestly, I don't even want to pick the winner of this game because it blows my mind that one of these teams can actually win. It should be called a 0-0 tie. Either that or forfeited. The Jaguars are an expansion team so they're excused, but the Jets have been around forever, and they still suck. How can Ryan Yarbrough, Charles Wilson, Tyrone Davis and Wayne Chrebet be a team's receiving crew? Poor Boomer..... Jacksonville 21 New York 20.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS (1-0) @ DENVER BRONCOS (0-1) Broncos favored by 8.

Gus Frerotte in, golden boy Heath Shuler out. At least for the time being, that is. Honestly, this probably helps the Skins more than it hurts them. Terry Allen can't be for real, can he? Too bad an exciting young team like Washington has to run into someone like Denver this early in the season. John Elway is on a mission, and I doubt any prisoners are being taken. Looks like Shannon Sharpe is picking up the family slack for Sterling, which is good for the Horsies..... Denver 30 Washington 16.

CHICAGO BEARS (1-0) @ TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS (1-0) Pick 'em game.

The Bears have always had their bruising defense going for them. It's their trademark. Now as they continue to develop an offense to go with them, they run into Tampa, whose defense, made up mostly of first round picks, continues to gain respect among the league. An added plus will be the play of prize free agent catch Alvin Harper, who gives Trent Dilfer another deep threat. It will be Eric Rhett who controls this game though, as the former Gator runs right through Chicago's defense..... Tampa Bay 19 Chicago 13.

DALLAS COWBOYS (1-0) @ MINNESOTA VIKINGS (0-1) Boys favored by 7.

The 'Boys look like gangbusters. Barry Switzer has them so focused on a return to the Super Bowl that I don't think they've bothered to notice that those our NFL teams they're trampling over on their way. Emmitt Smith looks more unstoppable each game he plays, while Troy Aikman's utilization of Jay Novacek has paid off. Don't mistake the fact that Minnesota has a talented team, but neither Warren Moon, Cris Carter, or the loud Metrodome fans can save them from this beating..... Dallas 38 Minnesota 11.

MONDAY NIGHT MATCH-UP

PITTSBURGH STEELERS (1-0) @ MIAMI DOLPHINS (1-0) Fish favored by 6.

A week one game has probably never meant as much to anyone as it did to Pittsburgh in its opener against Detroit. Yes, they won the game but they ended up losing Pro Bowl cornerback Rod Woodson and dependable QB Neil O'Donnell. Bam Morris is proving himself to be a franchise running back, but he can't stop the tremendously powerful Dolphins by himself. Face it, the Steel Curtain defense isn't the same without Woodson, and Dan Marino will make that evident..... Miami 27 Pittsburgh 17.

NFL picks with Tony Mejia erratic RB Garrison Hearst? Didn't think so..... Detroit 23 Arizona 14.

NEW YORK GIANTS (0-1) @ GREEN BAY PACKERS (0-1) Pack favored by 5.

Oh Sterling, where have you gone? Why are you analyzing games on ESPN instead of catching Brett Favre's passes? Lawrence Taylor, why don't you get out of that headlock Bam Bam Bigelow has you in and come back to glory? Oh, well. I guess they're not coming back, which means this is just another game on the schedule instead of a special occasion. Maybe Giant running back Herschel Walker is thinking the same as he watches Packer Edgar Bennett dismantle the New York defense the same way he used to. Phil Simms, have you gotten sick of NBC yet?..... Green Bay 24 New York 17.

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS (1-0) @ SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS (1-0) Niners favored by 6. Wow, the 49ers are actually playing a real opponent this year. I don't think they've played one since the '93 playoffs. Drew Bledsoe and his

The UCF cross-country team is looking for freshman Lou Snelling to make a big contribution this season.

'95 cross-country team may be best ever

□ Anything less than a TAAC title this season would be a disappointment for the Golden Knights.

by MIKE HORNBURG
Staff writer

"This is UCF's best team ever," said UCF cross-country coach Marcia Mansur-Wentworth. "Our goal is to win the TAAC conference championship. We are also going to field a full team at regionals for the first time, with our goal being a top 15 finish."

The atmosphere surrounding the men's and women's cross-country team has changed considerably in a year's time. After fourth place finishes at last year's conference championships, both teams are looking at the 1995 campaign as a time for personal records to be broken as well as winning the coveted TAAC championship.

Mansur-Wentworth has good reason to be optimistic. Both the men's and women's teams contain a proper combination of youth and experience.

The men's team is led by Eric Lipham, who this year has taken on the role as student-assistant, coach and team captain.

"Erik is taking his role as team captain very seriously," said Mansur-Wentworth. "Though he can only run individually because he is out of eligibility, he is a big example to the others. He will carry the team."

Senior Rene Plasencia and sophomore Jason Sullivan, as well as newcomers Danny Incantalupo, Lou Snelling and Troy Davis round out the top five.

Plasencia finished eighteenth at last year's TAAC championships, while Sullivan "had a great summer of training and has a positive attitude," stated Mansur-Wentworth. Incantalupo, a junior transfer from UT-Chattanooga, has a five-mile time of 26:40 to his credit.

"He is an experienced runner with great potential," said a confident Mansur-Wentworth.

Lou Snelling is an upcoming freshman from Seminole High School with loads of potential.

"During his senior year, he never lost a race until the state meet," commented Lipham. "He finished third after being 40th after the first mile. He should be top five."

Troy Davis is a junior transfer from Brevard Community College, a junior college running powerhouse in South Carolina.

"He has great potential as a distance runner and will challenge for the top spot in 1995," notes Wentworth. Jeff Budd, Toby Berndt, Brian Wenhold, Shane Brooks and Russ Miller make up the rest of a very talented and deep men's team.

The women's team is once again led by junior Heather Schultz, who is returning as the number one runner for the second straight year. Wentworth says she has an outstanding shot at breaking through at regionals. Seniors Jeanne Lesniak, whom Mansur-Wentworth said made incredible progress last year during track season and Tiffany Hill, along with Ktanh Bresnick and Micah Adraini, round out the top five for the upcoming season. Nicole Grappo, Kim Krienke, Meg Knapp, Jennifer Pewitt, Lorena Valenzuela and Valerie Valenzuela are among the other returnees in a very deep squad, which also includes freshmen April Vitori and local product Christy Miller. Miller, from Bishop Moore High School, was the subject of several Sentinel articles last year.

Rufus Hall's injury makes senior Eddie Keyes UCF's go-to receiver

by TIM SPRINGER
Staff writer

As if losing Todd Cleveland at the beginning of the year wasn't enough of a setback, the UCF Golden Knights football program will again see another receiver lost for the season.

After matching his 1994 season totals in the 1995 season opener, Rufus Hall will be sidelined for the remainder of the season due to a torn anterior cruciate ligament.

Coming off his finest performance as a Golden Knight just nine days earlier, with eight catches for 109 yards and three touchdowns, Hall picked up right where he left off. His pass catching abilities combined with tightly run routes had him seemingly becoming freshman sensation Daunte Culpepper's favorite target.

It took Hall less than a quarter to wear out his welcome in the Carson-Newman secondary. His third catch of the game, which may have been his last of the season, bailed the Golden Knights out of a third-and-five situation inside the 10-yard line to set up UCF's first score.

Coming down with the ball inside the five, Hall was tackled from behind causing his left knee to hyper-extend. Trainer Kevin Mercuri was 99% confident in his diagnosis of Hall's injury being a torn ACL and planned to confirm it after an MRI.

Although Hall's presence at the wide-out position will be missed, there are others that proved to be capable of filling the hole. Freshman Mark Nonsant stepped up admirably when Hall went down. Showing his deep threat capabilities, he burned the Carson-Newman secondary on a third-and-long for a 52 yard gain. "Rufus is too tough to sit out the season," said Nonsant. "But if he can't step up then I'll step up behind him."

Equally effective in a back-up roll was freshman Reggie Doster who finished the game with five catches for 90 yards, including a six-yard reception that he turned into a 52-yard sprint for a touchdown.

The wide receiver position has been paying dues from day one and will be a concern for the Golden Knights if injury continues to plague them. Stuart Stipe, who was to start at wide receiver at the beginning of the season, had been sidelined before the season began with a bruised knee. His return is greatly anticipated as the Golden Knights are finding themselves reaching deep into their very talented, but young corps of receivers.

Through all the set backs this unit has experienced optimism remains.

"Rufus is a great player and those are some big shoes to fill," said

photo/HUNT

Eddie Keyes had two receptions for 51 yards last Saturday in UCF's 35-21 victory over Division II Carson-Newman.

wide receiver Eddie Keyes. "But we have some able young players that coach [Wes] Chandler has been working with and we probably won't even miss a step."

With the UCF running game causing the opposition to become susceptible to the pass, the burden of the Golden Knights success is leaning on the receivers. An arm like Culpepper's needs targets and though there are a few young speedsters that are more than willing to get their hands in the game, their health is imperative to this team's success.

Wide receivers' coach Wes Chandler feels confident that his unit will be fine. "At some point in time these young guys have to play," said Chandler. "I don't look at them as freshman, the best players qualify to dress out for this football team and some of them just happen to be freshmen."

Reginald Doster is one of the freshman being counted on to step up because of the knee injury suffered by Rufus Hall.
